New Terms and Conditions United States Mint Bulk Programs

The United States Mint is updating the Terms and Conditions for both the Numismatic Bulk Purchase Program (NBPP) and the Authorized Bulk Purchase Program (APBB). These revised Terms and Conditions go into effect immediately and will require a signed acknowledgement and acceptance of the revised Terms and Conditions to remain active in the program.

Terms and Conditions:

Circumvention of any applicable Mint product order limit is strictly prohibited. Company agrees that it shall not make any effort, either using technological solutions or otherwise, to circumvent the Mint's product order limits. This prohibition includes orders placed via the Mint's e-commerce platform, including pre-orders and enrollments; telephone orders; and transactions at Mint retail sites, including any temporary sales sites. Examples of circumventing an order limit include, but are not limited to, using automated web robots ("bots") or other method(s) to place multiple orders cumulatively in excess of the product order limit on behalf of Company, any subsidiary of Company or any related commercial entity, or the employees or agents of the Company, a subsidiary, or any related commercial entity. The Mint reserves the right to review all orders and to cancel orders that violate a product order limit. If Company violates this strict prohibition against circumvention of any Mint product order limit, the Mint reserves the right to suspend or terminate Company's Authorized Bulk Purchaser Program status and/or Numismatic Bulk Purchaser Program status. Further, if a Company with Numismatic Bulk Purchaser Program status violates this strict prohibition against circumvention of any Mint product order limit, the Mint reserves the right to disregard the Company's annual purchase levels for the relevant two consecutive years for purposes of entry into the Authorized Bulk Purchaser Program.

One of the important goals of the United States Mint's Numismatic Bulk Purchaser Program and Authorized Bulk Purchaser Program is to better meet the needs of the individual customers of Mint products by providing more channels for Mint products to reach the general public. To that end, bulk purchaser participants of the NBPP and ABPP must be able to demonstrate to the Mint's satisfaction that their business model involves significant sales to the general public, as opposed to significant sales to other dealers.

Bulk purchaser participants of the NBPP and ABPP should be well-recognized as sellers to individual customers, which should be, in part, demonstrated by business plans and marketing materials. The United States Mint reserves the right to request supporting documentation and other industry sources to validate the business of any applicant or member company. The United States Mint reserves the right to review any applicant or member company's business to ensure that it matches this profile; the United States Mint further reserves the right to make membership decisions, including removal from either bulk program, based on whether a company's business does not have significant sales directly to customers.

The Mint is taking this action as a result of the disruption we have seen from technological solutions being employed on our website and elsewhere. The Mint is committed to providing both a positive experience and fair access to the products we bring to sale. As a member of our Bulk Programs receiving benefits, the Mint has an expectation of a responsible partnership and as such we are requesting that you sign and return this document by email to Numismatic_Bulk@usmint.treas.gov .
